130

Part II.

the world, if he can but keep thee from the heavenly Glory. He will allow thee the Hypocrites Reward, which is the applaule of men, if he can but keep thee from the Saints Reward, which is the favour of God. He cares not how much of thy Good things thou haft here, if he can deprive thee of the Everlafting Good. It is his defire that thou have thy Portion in this life, that thou mayst mifs of the Believers Portion in the next. Certainly the Devil himfelf by his Temptations, Apparitions, and Contracts, doth plainly tell us of a life to come, and what it is that conduceth most to our Good or Hurt, our Joy or Torment; and confequently teacheth m what to shoo/e, by tempting us fo palpa. bly and eagerly to refuse it.

You see now what a Jury of Witnesses I have brought in, to testifie which is the Better part: The Devil and the wicked are added to the rest, because you will hear no better witnesses. If you will, here are enow whose testimonies are unquestionable.

But when all is done, it is the Lord that is and will be Indge. All thefe are but mitneffes to difpofe thee to receive his fentence. Thou art no Believer, till the Authority of the Word of God, will ferve to fatisfie and refolve thee.

CHAP. III.

Eull proof (in twentie Queries) from Reason it self that there is a Life to come, and Holines is the way to it; and the Better Part : And that the Gospel is the certain Word of God (in fifteen Queries more) with Answers to the Infidels Objections.

A Nd by this time I come fomewhat nearer to the Infidel, and am ready to answer his fore-going Queftion, [where shall I find the Indgement or Testimony of the Lord?] O, faith the Unbeliever, if I were but sure that there were a life hereafter, where the goaly and the wicked shall be differently Rewarded, as the Scripture speaks, then I must confess he were no better then a mad manthat would prefer this world, or wilf ully live in sin, and would not seek. Heaven with all his might, and be as earnest in Holineso as the the Britteft Saint ! But I am not fure that this is true, and that there is any such difference after death, to be expetted.

131

Part II.

0

e

5.

50 000

645

17/0

COYO

o phi

h and h and h che sthe mad popula selo as

Anfw. Alas poor wretch ! Art thou at that pais ! Haft thou fo far loft the Knowledge of God, and of thy felf, and of thy end and business here, and of the word and works of God, as to turn worse then few, or Turk, or Heathen, even to think thy felf a beast, that hath no life nor happiness but this ? If this be thy case, I cannot now fland to deal with thee according to thy neceffity. I am now dealing with them that confels a Life hereafter : And because we cannot in all our writings repeat over the fame. things, I defire thee to peruse what I have already written for fuch as thee, in the Second Part of The Saints Reft, and in a -Treatife called The unreasonableness of Infidelity; and at prefent take only fome brief advertisments for thy conviction.

I. And first, whereas you fay you are not fure of a Life bereafter, I demand of you, Whether you are fure that there is no fuch life ? I am fure you are not. If you think you are, (which none but a debauched man can think, that hath put out the eye of Natural Light) let us hear your Proof, and you shall foon be told the vanity of it. But if you are not fure that there is no fuch life, then I would know of you, Whether a Poffibility of Inch Everlasting things deferve not greater care and diligence then is used by the Holysst Saint on earth? You fay, You are not sure that there is a Heaven for Saints. But what if it prove true, (as nothing more trne) will you fit still, and lose it for you know not what ? or for want of a little care in feeking it ? You fay, You know not whether there be a Hell for ungodly men, or no : But what if it prove true (as certainly it will) where are you then ? Will you venture your felves upon the Poffibility of fuch an Endless Loss and Torment, which now you might on reasonable terms escape ? You will confess that a Poffibility of a Kingdom should be more regarded, then a Certainty of a pin or a feather : And a Poffibility of fome Tormenting difease but for twenty years, should more carefully be avoided then the Certain stinging of a Nettle.

Quer. 2. You fay, You are not sure that there is a life to come ! But are you sure to continue the life you have? Or is it any great matter that you are called to lofe, for the obtaining of that life that you are not fare of ? You know the contrary, or eafily may do. You are fure that you have not long to be here. Nothing more (ure

132

Part II.

Sure then that you will mortly die. And you are not fure but it may be to morrow. And while you are here, it is nothing worth the naming (but what hath reference to another life) that you do poffefs. What have you to your flesh, but meat, and drink, and fleep, and luft, and fuch kind of beaftial delights ! Which it is better be without, then have, if we could also be without the need of them. Can you call these by the name of Happines, without renouncing your Reason and Experience ? You fay, You know not what God will do for you hereafter : But you know . what fin and the world will do for you here : Even Nothing but hold you in a transitory dream, and then difmils you into rottenness and dust. If you were not certain of another life, as long as you are most certain of the vanity of this, doth not Reafon tell you, that a Poffible Everlafting Glory , fhould be preferred before a Certain vanity? If you were not sure to get any thing by God and a Holy Life, yet as long as you are stre, even as fure as you live, that you can lose nothing by it, that is worth the talking of, is not the cafe then refolved, which way is the Better ? If you fay, you shall lose your fleshly pleasures; I answer, They are not worth the having. The pleasare doth not countervail the trouble : no more then the delight of fcratching (as I faid before) doth countervail the trouble of theitch. Moderazion and temperance is sweeter then excels. If too much be better shen enough, and that which hurteth nature better then that which helpeth is, then felf-destroying and fighting against your bodily welfare, would be beft. Is not a temperate meal more pleafant then a gluttonous surfet, that is worse to the feeling of the glutton the next day ? Is not common food that collecth not much, and kindleth no troublefom itch in a mans appetite, more pleafant then enticing coftly dainties ? Is not fo much drink as nature requireth, much better then that which makes the ftomack fick, the brain witlefs, if not the purfe pennylefs, and breedeth many noy fom difeafes to the fleft, and hafteneth death, that hasteth of it felf? By that time the gawdy apparel, the dainty fare, and drink is paid for ; and by that time the flesh hath fuffered all that pain and fickness that are the ordinary followers of excess, me thinks you should say, that if there were no Hell; your fin were a punishment it felf, and that in this life it brings more pain then pleasure, and that such kind of pleasure is not worth the keeping, to the hazard of the least Poffibility of an Ever-

Part II.

19.1

of 10

25

1-

10

リヨ山 ele el

.

et.

16

EF

23-rbe not tore has a state

et'

of y's

65

IOE

an

Everlafting life. Wouldst thou under thy hand and feal give away thy hopes and poffibility of everlafting life, and ran the hazzard of an everlafting Torment, for the Pleafures of fin, or to avoid the trouble of a Holy life? Why then thou maift as well even fell it all for pins, or points, or childrens rackets Then thou art as foolifh as the worft of Witches, that fell their fouls to a lying spirit, that, whatever he doth promise them, doth pay them with nothing but calamity and deceir. When thou comeft to know better what it is that the world can do for thee, thou wilt then confess there was nothing in it, that should not have been lleighted for the smalest hopes of an Everlasting life. Dost thou think the world will be much better to thee, for the time to come than hitherto it hath proved? Deceive not thy felf; it will prove the fame : yea and worft at laft. Look back now upon all the pleafures of thy life, from thy infancy to this day, and tell me what the better thou art for them. If this were the hour of thy death, would all the profits or pleafures of thy life, be any comfort to thee, or make thy death a whit the eafier ? Have the dust or bones of the Carkaffes of Voluptuous finners, any comfort or benefit now, by all the pleafure of their former fin ? Surely I need-not all these words to a man of common understanding, to convince him that if Heaven were as ancertain as the Infidel doth imagine, a man of Reafon should venture all that he hath upon the meer Poffibility; becaufe his All indeed is Nothing, and he is fure he can be no lofer by the bargain : it being not fo much as the venture of a pin for the Poffibility of a Crown-

Quer. 3. But thats not all. What if I shall prove to thee pair all denyal, that even in this life, Holinefs is far the most delightful, gainful, honourable life, and that the ungodly live in a continual mifery? Will not this ferve turn to convince thee that a Holy life, should be undertaken for a meer Possibility of Heaven, if we had no more? Read but the Proofs of this anon, and if I make it not good to thee, call me a deceiver. But if I prove that Holinefs is the fwatteft life on Earth, and Heaven the fure Reward bereafter; and that fin is a misery it fell to the finner, and Hell the certain punishment hereafter, then fee that those confefs that God is a good Master, and the Devil a bad one; for at last thou shalt be forced to confefs it.

Quer. 4. Well ! You fay You are not fure that there is another life for man. But have you used the Means to make it sure to you, and to be mell-refolved? If you have, then you have impartially fearched, and prayed, and meditated on the Word of God, and heard what can be faid by Wifer men, for that which you fay you are not fure of ; but if you have trufted to your own understanding, and neglected Meditation, Prayer, Enquiry, and other needful means, what wonder then if you be uncertain, Even whether there be a Heaven or Hell ? Its no difgrace to Phyfick, or Akronomy, or Mufick, or Languages, or Navigation, but to you, if you fay that you are uncertain of all their conclufions, when you never studied them, or at least never studied them with that diligence and patience as those must do that will attain a certain fatisfying knowledge.

53 they

134

Quer. 5. Moreover, if you are so uncertain of a Life to come, I would ask you, Whether in all your fearch and fludy, you have behaved your selves as Learners, or rather as proud self-conceited men, that think themselves wife enough before they learn, to try and judge their Books and Teachers. If this be your cafe, no wonder if you be Infidels. If you come with fuch a disposition to read a Book of Aftronomy or Phyfick, you will never learn. If you go to any Schoolmaster, or to learn any language or fcience, and think your felves able before you have learnt them, to try and judge your Teacher and, all the Books you read, and fo will reject all that you do not understand, or agreeth not with you former conceits, you will fooner prove doting fools then Schollars, and sooner be the derision of Rational men, then come to the knowledge which you pretend to feek. Come to Christs School as little children in meekness and humility and a willingness to be taught, and patiently continue in the use of means till Learning can be attained, before you think your felves fit to cenfure the Truth of God which you are learning, and then tell me whether God doth not refolve you.

Quer. 6. Moreover, I would know of you that doubt fo of the life to come, Whether you have been true to fo much Light as you received, and have lived in obedience to the Truth which God revealed to you. Or rather whether you have not wilfully and knowingly lived in some secret or open fin, and striven against the Light and Spirit of Christ, and abused the truth which you have known, and used violence with your own confciences? If so (which its ten to one is your case) it is no wonder if you are

Part II.

Part II.

j,

1

山

10

120 ę,

96

a

1) 00

00

18

19 ap

03

18

05 wes cell of the set en ch

es?

you are

are Infidels, forfaken of God whom you first for fook, and given up to Pride and Self-deceit.

Quer. 7. If Man have no Life to live but this, and no further End of his Actions then a Beaft, nor any further account to give, then he is indeed but one of the higher fort of Beafts, differing but gradually from a Dog, as a Dog doth from a Swine. And if this be indeed thy judgement of thy felf, I demand, Whether or no thou be content to be used as a Beast? Wilt thou not take it ill to be called or judged a Beast by another ? Or wouldst thou have others judge better of thee then thy felf? Wouldst thou have no man regard thy Propriety, or Life any more then a Beast is to be regarded ? A Beast hath no Propriety, no not of that which Nature hath given him. You accuse not your felves of doing him any wrong, when you deprive the fheep of his fleece, nor when you make a constant drudge of your Horfe or Ox. And do you think it lawful before God, for any one that can but master you, to do the like by you? to ftrip you naked, and to make pack-horfes of you, and use you as their flaves? We take it to be no fin to take away the lives of Beasts, if it be but for our own commodity: We kill Oxen, and calves, and theep, and fwine, and fowle and fishes for our daily food. And is it lawful before God for others to do fo by you ? Should nothing restrain them but want of Power to overcome you? If you fay that you are Beafts, as Beafts you mould be used.

Quer. 8. Moreover I would know of you, Whether you think, that there is any other morld, which spiritual inhabitants do posses? If you fay, No, you go against all Reason and experience. Against Experience : because that many a hundred Witches, and many Apparitions and haunted houses have put the matter out of question (for all that many reports of fuch things have been false.) And against all Reason ; because we see that this inferiour world is everywhere replenished with inhabitants : The earth hath men. and beafts, the aire hath birds, the mater hath fishes; And can a man of common Reason then think that the superiour Regions . which we fee and which we fee not (which for greatness and for fpendor and excellency are a thousand fold above this earth) thould all be uninhabited and destitute ! and that there are not creatures also there for excellency and Number incomparbly be-yond the inhabitants of this leffer lower world? Certainly nothing is made in vain, nor are the works of God fo monstroufly dil-

....

126 disproportioned and discomposed, as for the Nobler parts to be only for the bafer. The Heavens that are over us, and all the vast and most excellent parts of the Creation, have a use that is answerable to their excellency. God makes not cottages to be inhabited, and Pallaces and Cities to lie wast and defert to no ule.

But if you grant there is another world proportionaby thus replenished with creatures, you may eafily see from thence a Probability, that man shall be translated thither. Why not the foul of man, as well as those spirits that in affirmed shapes have made their appearances unto man? As all things ripen to their perfection, why fhould it feem any more improbable that the foul shall pais hence into the world of spirits, then that the chicken shall come out of the shell, and the infant out of the wombe, into fo wide and light a world as this, when before they were shut up in a narrow darkness, and never heard nor knew any thing of that world, which they enter into ?

Quer. 9. Do you know why it is that God hath given man that knowledge, and free-will, and capacity to seek another life, which beasts have not, if he be intended for no other life then beasts ? If God be no most Wise, he is not God. If he be, then he maketh not so excellent faculties as these in vain, but fitteth all his Creatures to their uses. Every workman will do fo by his work. Why is a knife made keen, but to cut with ? And what are the wheels of your watch or clock made for, but to fhew you the hour of the day ? Look now into the whole frame of the forl of man, and judge by its aptitude what it is made for.

I. Man is capable of Knowing that there is a God, and knowing his Attributes, which Beafts are not ; because they be not made to enjoy him.

2. Man is capable of knowing his Relation to this God, that he is our Creator, and we his Creatures; he our Lord and we his Own; he our Ruler, and we he Subjetts ; he our Benefactor, and we his Benificiaries : And we are capable of Knowing our Duty in these several Relations. And certainly all this is not in Vain.

3. Man is capable of Knowing that the Everlasting Love of God is that alone that can make him Happy : And why would God shew him this, if he were not capable of enjoying it ? Reafon tells men that nothing here can make us Happy, and that God 4 Man san doit.

dep

In the hor bear in th fitted for 2

praciou

Part II.

1º

10 ç

ę

y

N

R'

200 it the chis in cia in of uld

lea-

Gad

Man

4. Man is capable of Knowing that certain Duties are to be performed in order to the Pleafing of his Lord, and what those Duties are: which would not be, if we were not capable of Pleafing him, and fo of being happy in him.

5. Man is made capable of Defiring after the Everlasting Love of God; and that above all things in this world. And God hath not made fuch Defires in vain.

6. Man is capable of Loving God as an Object Everlastingly to be enjoyed, and that above all other thing.

7. Man also is capable of referring all the creatures unto God, and using all things but as Means to this Everlasting end. Thus do believers, And furely all this is not in vain.

8. Man is a Creature that cannot regularly be moved according to his nature, to the performance of his Duty to God and Man, unlefs it be by Motives fetcht from the life to come. Take off that poife, and all his orderly motion will foon ceafe. Nothing below fuch Everlasting things are fit or fufficient Morally to govern him, and caufe him to live as man should live:

9. He is possessed of actual fears of Everlasting Punishment, and shall never perfectly overcome these fears by his greatest Unbelief.

10. He is capable of fetching his higheft Pleasures from the fore-thoughts of Everlasting Happines, and receiving from hence his encouragement in well doing and foretaft of the Reward. Now this being the Natural frame of man, as is passed denyal (when Brutes have no such thing at all,) let Reason judge whether the God of Nature have made this nature of man in vain that we see hath fuited every other creature to its use: our horses to carry us, and our Ox to draw for us, and the earth to bear its several fruits for them and us: And hath he mistaken only in the making of man, and gone beyond his own Intention, and fitted him for those uses and enjoyments that he was never meant for ? These are not Imputations to be cast upon the most wife and gracious God.

Quer. 10. Moreover I demand of you, What is the End of man and all these special faculties, if there be no life for him after this? Either he hath an End which he is to intend, or he bath none. If none, then he hath nothing to do in the world. For all actions of man are nothing else but the Intending of some End, T

.1; (

:137

138

Part II.

and the choisse and use of means for the attaining it. Man mult lie down and fleep out his days, if this be true that he hath no end: Nay fleep it felf hath some. And he cannot choose but Intend some End and seek it, if he would never so fain, unless he will take some opiate flupifying potion, or run mad. And he that made bim also and placed him here, had some End in it: For if man had thus no End, he could have no Maker or Efficient canse: For every Rational efficient intendeth an end in all his works. (And he that made men Rational, is Eminently much more Knowing then his Creature) And if we had no Maker, then we have no Being, and so are no Men.

But if Man unquestionably have an End, it is either something that is Nobler or Bafer then himfelf, and fome flate that is Better or Worfe then that in which he feeks his end. Bafer it cannot be : for that were Monstrous, that Baser things should be the End of the more Noble. Beafts are made for Man, and therefore not Man for Beasts. The Earth is made for Beasts and Men, and therefore we are not made for the Earth. Our Means is not our End. If you grant that we are made for God that made us (as nothing more fure) then How is it that God san be our End if there be no life but this? I. Here we are but in Seeking him, and still are forced to complain that we fall short. Here we are but in the use of means. 2. We find that our Knowledge, Defires, and Love, will here reach no higher then to carry us on towards that perfection that is in our eye, and not to fatisfie the foul. The creature that doth attain his End, hath Reft in it, and is better then before. But we have nothing here like Reft, and thould be in a worfe condition hereafter, if we had no more. 3. Here we fin against the Lord, and wrong him more then we ferve him : we know but little of him and his work ; and feryeand praise him but a little, and not according to the capacity of our nature. And therefore if he have not a higher end for us, and we a higher end to feek then any is in this world to be found, our Natures seem to be in vain. For my part; though it be in weakness, I must needs fay it is my trade, and daily work to ferve my God, and feek after an immortal bleffednels: And if I thought that there were no fuch thing to be had, and no fuch use for me, I must needs stand still, and look about me, or in my practice unman my feif by a brutish life, as I had brutified my felf in my effimation and Intention. For what could T

139

Part II.

R. S.

p.

nd

pill

pde

Tall

For Act

Rich

C.00

ne 115

300 che

re

300

Out Gal

UL

rí.

10

len nd

mag

ing in the state

001 a 001 a chis

ALC 3

fed-had, 2000

bad

ould

I find to do in the world ! What should I do with my Reason and Knowledge, or any faculty above a beaft, if I had no higher a work and end then beafts ? Verily, if I had loft the Hopes of another life, I knew not what to do with my felf in the world ! but must become some other creature, and live some other kind of life, then now I live.

Quer. 11. Moreover, I desire you to confider, Whether it be credible to a man of Reason, that God made his nobleft creature in this world with a Nature that should be a Necessary Milery and Vexation to it felf above all the mislery of the baser creatures ? and that the wifer any man is, the more miferable be must needs be?

This is not credible. Yet thus would it be, if there were no life but this. For 1. the Knowledge that man hath of a superiour Good (which beafts have not) would Tantalize him and torment him : To know it, and must not partake of it, is to be used as a Horfe that is tyed near his Provender, which he must not reach.

2. The Love, and Defires, and Hopes , that I before defcribed . would all be our Vexation. To Love and Defire that which we cannot attain, and that with the chief of our Affections, is but to make us miferable by vertue.

3. To useall those Means, and do the Duties before-mentioned in vain, when we are not capable of the End, is but to roll at Sifiphus ftone, and to be made to wash Blackamores, or to fill a bottomless tub?

4. No creature here but man, hath Fears of any milery after death, and therefore none would be here fo miferable. There is no Infidel but must confess, that for ought he knows there may be a life of punishment for the wicked. And this [may be] will breed more fears in a confiderate man, then Death it felf alone could do.

5. Or if there were no Fear of that, yet Man hath Reason to think before-hand of his Death, and to think of his abode in Darknels, which Beafts have not. To think of being turned to a ftinking carrion, and to a clod, and fo continuing for ever, without any Hope of a Refurrection, would be matter for continual horrour to a confidering man, which Brutes are not molefted with. And mile men that can fore-see, would be tormented more then fools. All this is incredible, that God fhould make his nobler creature to be Naturally most miserable ; and give him Knowledge and

140

Part II.

and Affections, and set a Certain Death, and Possible Torment continually before his eyes, to Torment him, without any Remedy! And besides the Hoped Life hereaster, there is none.

Quer. 12. Do you think that the Belief of another life, is needful or nfeful, to the well governing of this world, or not? If you fay no, I. Why then do Infidels and Brutists say, that Religion is but the device of men for the Governing of the world? and that without it subjects would not be Ruled? You confess by this your frivilous objection, that the world cannot be Ruled well without the Belief of a life to come.

2. And it is most manifest from the very nature of man, and from the common experience of the world. 1. If man be wellgoverned, it must be either by Laws containing Rewards and penalties, or without. Not without. For, 1. All the world doth find it by experience, that it cannot be; and therefore every Commonwealth on earth is Governed by Laws, either Written, Customary or Verbal.

2. If the Love of Vertue for it felf fhould prevail with one of a thousand, that would be nothing to the Government of the world.

3. Nor could any man be effectually induced to love Vertue for it felf, according to the doctrine of the Bratifis : For Vertweit felf is made no Vertue by them, but a deformity of the mind, while they overthrow the End, and Object, and Law that it is measured and informed by (as I shall more fully open to you anon). It is therefore most certain that no Nation is or can be Governed as beseemeth man, without Proposed punishments and R. wards.

And if fo, then thefe must be either temporal punifhments and bencfits, or fuch as are to be had in the Life to some. That Temporal punifhments and benefits cannot be Motives fufficient for any tolerable (much lefs perfect or fufficient.) Government, is a molt evident Truth : For I. de facto we fee by experience, that no people live like men that be not Governed by the Belief of another life. The Nations that believe it not, are Savages almost all, living naked and bestially, and knowing nothing of vertue or vice, but as they feel the commodity or difcommodity to their flefth : They eat the flefth of men, for the most part, and live as brutishly as they believe. And if you fay that in China it is not fo, I answer, one part of them there believe the Immortality of the

Part II.

1.

ant

か el

OU

char char

COL

1011

101

1º

10

1

10

the foul, and most of them take it as probable, and fo the Nation hath the Government which it hath, from everlasting Motives.

And if you fay that the antient Romans had a fufficient Government, I anfwer, I. The most of them believed a life to come, and it was but a few that denyed the Immortality of the foul : and therefore it was this that Governed the Nations. For those that believed another life, had the Government of the few that did not believe it, or elfe the Government it felf had been more corrupt. 2. And yet the faultiness of their belief appeared in the faultiness of their Government. Every Tyrant took away mens lives at pleasure. Every Citizen that had flaves (which was common) at pleasure killed them, and cast them into the fishponds. The fervants fecretly poysoned their masters, and that in so great numbers, that Seneca faith, Epist. 4. ad Lucil. that the [Number of those that were killed by their fervants, through treachery, deceit, or force, mas as great, as of them that were killed by Kings]; which was not a few.

2. It is apparent that the world would be a Wildernefs, and men like wild and ravenous beafts, if they were not Governed by Motives from the Life to come.

1. Becaufe the Nature of man is fo corrupt and vicious, that we fee how prone they are to evil, that everlafting Motives themfelves are too much uneffectual with the most.

2. Every man naturally is felfifb, and therefore would measure all Good and Evil with reference to themfelves, as it was commodious and incommodious to them. And fo vertue and vice would not be known, much lefs regarded.

3. By this means there would be as many Ends, and Laws, or Rules, as Men; and fo the world would be all in a Confufion.

4. If Neceffity forced any to combine, it would be but as Robbers, and frength would be their Law and Inflice; and he that could get hold of another mans effate, would have the best Title.

5. All those that had but frength to do mischief, would be under no Lam, nor have any sufficient Motive to Restrain them. What should restrain the Tyrants of the world, that rule over many Nations of the earth, if they believe no Punishment after death, but that their Laws and Practises should be as impious and bestial

142 bestial, as their lufts can tempt them to defire ? What should re-Arain Armies from Rapes and Cruelty, that may do it unpunithed ? Or popular tumults that are fecured by the multitude.

6. And there would be no restraint of any villany that could but be secretly committed. And a wicked wit can eafily hide the greatest mischiefs. Poysoning, stabbing, burning houses, defaming, adultery, and abundance the like, are eafily kept fecret by a man of wir, unless a special Providence reveal them (as usually it doth).

7. At least, the probability of fecrecy would be fo great, and also the probability of finful advantage, that most would venmire.

8. And all those fins would be committed without scruple ; which the Law of man did appoint no punishment for : as Lying, and many odious vices.

9. If one man, or two, or ten should be deterred from poysoning you, or burning your houses, or killing your cattle, Ge. by humane Laws, a thousand more would be let loofe and venture.

10. All the fins of the heart would have full Liberty, and a defiled foul have neither cure nor reftraint. For the Laws and judgments of men extend not to the heart. All the world then might live in the Hatred of God, and of their neighbours, and in daily Murder, Theft, Adultery, Blafphemy of the heart. Within they might be as bad as Devils, and fear no punifhment; for man can take no cognizance of it. And it is the heart that is the Man. You fee then what perfons the Infidels and Brutifts would have us all be ! What hearts and lives mankind fhould have according to their Laws ! Be Devils within , and murder , and deceive , and commit adultery as much as you will, fo you have wit to fcape the Gallows, and you are Schollars fit for fuch bestial Mafters.

11. Yea let me add this one more mischies : Hereby they would deftroy all Charity and Good works, except the very bestial Love of those that please mens lufts. For no Laws of men compell men to the Love of God or man : Nor much to Good works ! Who would do any thing comparatively, that believed not a Reward and Puniforment hereafter ? If we give all that we have to the poor, we can bere have no Reward, but the breath of a mans mouth, which at death we understand not. Take down the everlasting lasting Ends and Motives, and all good works, and inward virtnes too that should produce them, are taken down.

Part II.

10

And by this time you may fee, what a litter of bears, what a pack of ravening dogs, what Cannibals the world frould be turned into, by the doctrine of the Brutifts, that deny the life to come.

Well! but perhaps you will by this time have fo much fenfe. as to confels that Threatnings and Punishments, Hopes and Fears of the State of another Life are necessary to the well governing of this world. And if fo, I defire no more, to fatisfie any manthat believes that there is a God, (and that is any man that hath not drowned his wits in fin.) For I. This will then shew that the Nature of man, is formed for another life : and God did not make him fuch in vain. 2. And certainly if everlasting Motives must be put into the Laws that govern us, and into our Hopes and Fears, then it is not possible, but fuch things there are to be expected. For any man to imagine that God. would make a world, which he cannot Govern but by falles bood and deceit, this is to fay that God is no God. For all lying and falshood comes either from a want of Power, or Wildom, or Goodness, when men either cannot make good their words or otherwise attain their ends; or when they have not wit to know what is, or was, or will be, or when they are fo bad as to be disposed to deceive. But he that ascribeth any of these to God, doth worfe then to fay that there is no God. If I hate-deceit and Lying my felf ; the God that gave me all that little Good which I have, must hate it more. Dream not of any but a worm: or fool, or impious tyrant, that needs or loves deceit and fallbood to attain their ends. Judge by the frame of Heaven and Earth, and by that little Good that is in Good men, whether the living God be one that needs fuch Hellish Engines to Rule the world.

If therefore in order to the Government of mankind we must needs Believe a life to come, it is certainly True; And why do not you believe that which Government requireth you to believe.

Quer. 13. Moreover I demand of you, Whether you take God indeed to be the Governour of this world, or not? By [Governour] I mean properly, One that Ruleth the Rational Creature as such, by Moral Means, even Laws and Executions. I exclude not his Potential.

144

Part II.

the Potential, Efficacious operations, but conclude a Neceffity of Moral Government. I know a felf-conceited Popifh Infidel hath endeavoured to perfwade the world, that Gods Soveraignty and Moral Government are Metaphorical expressions, arising from the milconceivings of weak men ; and that Wifer men like himself do conceive of Gods Government only as of an Artificers disposal of his works, that Physically accomplisheth all his Will. As if Gods Natural Caulations, and his Moral were inconfiftent; Or as if God were not Wife and Good as well as Almighty! or did not in his Government of man demonstrate, his sapience in his Laws, and his Goodness in Attractive Benefits, as well as his Power in meer Natural Motion ! Or as if man were not a Rational Creature, and a free-agent, and were not to be governed according to his Nature, by Objects fuited to his Intellect and Will : but must be used and ruled like a stone, or beast ! Or as if God could not infallibly attain his Ends by a Sapiential Government, and by preferving the liberty of the Will, as well as by a meer Necessitating causation! This man was so enamoured upon his fupposed skill in Phyficks and Metaphyficks, that he not only loft his Morality, but grew to be fuch an Enemy to it, as to blot out all true Morality, Civility, Policy, Oeconomy at a dash; and flands with the rest of the Proud fraternity, as a Monument of Gods justice against the Proud, fo deplorately forfaken even in the Reason that he glorieth of, that children may perceive his folly. He that is all for Operations of Power, as excluding Sapiential Government by Laws, and their just executions, doth think fure that a horfe hath more of the Image of God then a man : For he is much ftronger. Bruitish force would be more excellent then the Attraction of Goodnels and the Conduct of Wildom, if the Government (which is no Government) that these men dream of, were the most excellent. As he will allow his Artificer to thew as much at least of his wit, by making a Watch or Clock that shall, though by a necessity, move without the finger of the workman continually moving it; fo methinks he should allow the Infinitely Wife and Gracious God, to be nevertheles Wife or Gracious, if he Rule the Rational-free-agent, without a forcible Phyfical Neceffitation, by a Gracious Attraction and Sapiential Conduct, agreeable to the Reafon and Liberty of the Creature, as long as we exclude not the Co-working of Omnipotency, nor deny the infallibility of Divine Potestichly

Divine Predefinition, which may be secured with the security of the Creatures Liberty.

Part II.

In a word, to deny God to be the Soveraign Governour of the world in proper fenfe, 1. Is a denying him to be God: it being a term of Relation, comprizing Government, and not of meer Nature: When it is commanded us that we have no other Gods, and when we are required in the holy Covenant to take the Lord for our God, and give up our felves to him as his people, it most plainly expressed that his Governing Authority, or his Soveraignty is comprehended in the term God. And indeed having made a Rational-free-creature, whose Nature requireth Moral Government, it followed by necessary resultancy that he that had fole Authority and sover further of the his Soveraign.

2. These Proud Blasphemers that deny Gods proper Government, do contradict the very drift of Scripture, that calleth him our King and Governour, and requireth our subjection and obedience.

3. They deny the being of Gods Laws, both the Law of Nature, and the Written Laws, and fo blot out the Word of God, and the fenfe and use of all his works. Though they allow them a certain Physical operation on us, yet as Laws they do obliterate them: that is, as they are Norma officii & judicii, our Rule of duty, and expectation, and Gods refolved way of Judging.

4. They hereby overthrow all Duty as fuch; and make Good actions to be but as the motion of the arrow that hits the white, and to have none but a Physical goodness in them. For there can be no proper obedience, where there is no proper Government of Law.

5. Hereby also they deny all Inward Virtne: For this also can have but a Physical Goodness, if Government and Laws be down.

6. Hereby they deny the Being of fin: For where there is no Law and Government, but meer Physical necefficating motion, there is no Tranfgreffion. And therefore when they make a deal of talk about P urging away fin, it is not fin indeed that they mean; but a meer Physical difease to be Physically ex-Pugned.

7. Hereby they deny all the proper Indgement of God by U Chrift 146 A Sains er a Dinit. Christ at the last day, and make his Judgement to be nothing but Execution.

Yea, and 8. All proper Execution is denyed, as Vindictive, or Remunerative, and so all Justice.

9. The Authority of every Prince on earth is overthrown. For there can be no Anthority but from Gods Soveraign Anthority, any more then any Being without derivation from the first being. They may talk to the ignorant of Contracts, and Peoples Wills being the Original of Governing Anthority, and deisie the multitude and make them give that which they never had; but a mean understanding may perceive their folly.

10. Hereby they deftroy all bumane Laws, that must receive their ftrength from Gods Laws, or have none: and so they abfolve all subjects in the world from confcientious obligations to obedience. If God have no proper Governing Laws but Physical motions, then we are no further obliged to obey men, by any Law of God, then we are effectually moved to it, and then we do obey them. And if so, then we can owe no more obedience to Parents, Masters, or Princes then they force us to 11 fthey can make us obey them, well and good: If not, we break no Law of God by disobedience.

These and many such like are the consequents of that horrid doctrine that denyeth God to be the Soveraign Ruler of the world. In a word, it dasheth out at once all Government, Laws, 7ustice, Obedience, Good Works, and all Morality, dissolving the whole frame of the Universal Monarchy of the world, and denying God to be our God, and man to be man and his subject.

But if you yield that God is the Governous of the world, it is then most evident that there's a life to come. For if he Govern us, it is by Laws, and Judgement : And if by Laws, which are they? There is nothing known among Rational men, by the name of a Law of God, which containeth not Promifes and Threatnings of Rewards and Punifoments hereafter. He hath no Laws for the Governing of this world, that contain no Motives but from Temporal things. And I shewed you before, that he need not, he cannot Govern the world by falshood and deceit. And we fee here by experience, that there is no fuch Excention in this life, of the Laws of God, as are fufficient to the ends of Government. The wicked prosper, and destroy the just: The best do most deny their flesh, and are opprest by others. You fee this your felves, and

Part II.

Part II.

e II.

gbut

divis

O.T.C.

borit)s

being

Wills

pistin.

mean ceive 3b-

510 fical any

We

lence

V Call

frid outs the (15)" hen

100

Sel .

160

OF

DI.

ny

10: nA

0 69

147

and make it an Argument for your Infidelity. But flay a little till the Affizes come. It follows not that there is no Government or Juffice, becaufe the Thief or Murderer is not hanged before the Affizes, or as foon as he hath done the fact. Eternity is long enough for their punishment. If God then be the Governour of the world as most certainly he is, then is there a Reward. and Punishment hereafter ; and Gods Day will come, when Mans is past.

Quer. 14. My next Question is, Whether you think that God should be Loved, and Obeyed, or not? If not, then certainly none should be Loved or Obeyed. For none deferves it, if he deferve it not, from whom weare, and have all our benefits. But if he be, then I further Question you.

Whether it be likely or possible, that any man, or at least all the best people in the world, should be losers by God, and their Love and obedience to him ? And whether it be Credible, that Goodnels and Obedience to the Lord, fhould be the conftant certain way to mens undoing, loss or milery? I think you will fay, if you believe that there a God, that this cannot be. For certainly, he that fets us a work, will own us in it, and fave us harmlefs. An honeft man will take it for a difgrace to him, that his fervice should be the shame and mifery of his fervants, and he should make them no fatisfaction. It God be not Able to bear us out, he is not God. And his Wildom and Goodnels affure us that he will do it. So that there is no Possibility that Goodne's should be mans loss, and any thould finally be losers by God. On this affurance I am encouraged to lay out all my time and labour, and dare boldly venture all that I have, in the work of God : For I am fure I cannot lofe by him.

But be thou judge thy felf whether his fervice would not make us losers, if there were no life but this (though I confeis the loss would be fmall and fhort :) Who are fo hated, and perfecuted as they that ferve God best? How many thousands of them have been fain to give up their bodies to Tormentors, and their lives. to the devouring flames? The very work of God confifteth in flesh displeasing things : To deny our felves and contemn this world, and live foberly, and righteoufly and godly in the world, and to be for this the fcorn of men, is the lot of the obedientic bas , abiswood , awall

If you fay, This is not the Lot of any but those that are overrighteous, U 2 righteous, I anfwer I. We cannot be over obedient to God. 2. You contradict the experience of all ages. Even the form of Godlinefs is hated by the Profane; and temperance by the drunkard; and he shall be their form that runs not with them to excesses of ryot: Seneca tells us that it was so even at Rome among the Heathens, that he was their derision that would not be as bad as the reft. If therefore in this life only we had hope, we were of all men most miserable, I Cor. 15.19. Not but that even here we have the far better life then wicked men; But that is because it favoureth of the life to come to which it hath relation. Otherwise we should lose onr credit, ease, pleasure, profit in the world, and have nothing for it. Faithfully Labour for God, O my foul; and never fear being a loser by his work.

-

148

Quer, 15. I further aske, Whether you would be alone of this brutish Opinion, or would you have all others of your wind ? If you would not have others Believe as you do, it feems you think not well of your own opinion but take it to be naught for men . to hold. And why should not all men hold it if it, were true? But if you would have all of that mind, it were time for you to look about you. Certainly the Law makers would make other Laws then now they do, and men would lead other kind of lives : And what fecurity you would have of your goods, or houfes, or lives a week, from the malice or coverousness of others; I cannot imagine. You would not dare to travel by the way, or look out among men : You could not truft your fervants, nor your wives, or husbands, because there would be nothing but temporal punishment to restrain them, which cunning might escape. I do not think but you would rather have fervants, or neighbours or husband, or wife, that believe a Life to come, then those that do not, if you had tryed others but a little while, and feen how little they were to be trufted, and confequently how bad your opinion is.

Quer. 16. And I would know, Whether you pretend to any bonefty and Conficience, or not? If not, you will give us leave to judge of you, and truft you accordingly. If you do, then mpon what ground is it possible for you to be honeft? If you believe no life to come, you must take your pleasure here on earth for your chiefest happiness: and you cannot believe any proper. Government of the world by the Laws, Rewards, and punishment, sufficient to restrain men from their fin. Vertue can be

Part II.

18

Wy

fon

ters,

Part II.

d.

he

11

1h

R

be

e' al no Vertue, if God no more regard it; and fin is no fin, if against no Law. Indeed while you live among Believers, where vice is in difgrace, you may for your credit seem to be vertuons : But your Profession alloweth us to judge that you avoid no evil that you dare commit, if it do but fuit with your flefbly interest. He that believeth no Life to come, and tells me fo, doth bid me, in effect, to suppose him resolved for all the wickedness imaginable, so far as he dare, and hath temptations and opportunity. Are you of this Brutish judgement ! I shall expect from you then no better then a brutish life : and trust you less then I would do a brute, because you have more interest and temptation to do evil, and more canning to perform it. Are you Brutifts in opinion? Then you are already habitually perfidious, cruel, covetous, malicious, murderers, whoremongers, thieves, lyars, and worfe, if any thing be worfe ! For honeft you cannot for fhame expect that any fhould efteem you. I will not believe a word you fay, further then fome interest of your own is concerned in the truth of it.

Qu. 17. If it be not the very Light and Law of Nature that teacheth and obligeth a man to believe a life to come, how comes it to pass, that all the world, except a few Savages and Cannibals, and here and there an Apostate among us, do universally profess to believe it? The Jews, the Turks, the Heathens of most Nations, besides the Christians, do all make it an Article of their Belief. We differ indeed about the way (and yet are all agreed that Godliness and Honessy; fearing God, and doing Righteousness, are neceffary); but that there is another life, we are in almost all the world agreed. And will you go against the light of humane Nature it felf? Or with what face can you expect that here and there fach a wretch as you, should be though wifer then all the world, till you give us better evidence of your wildom? And how justly do they perish that will follow you?

Quer. 18. Are not those that Believe the Life to come of Holyer lives (for the generality) then those that do not ? And whether is it like that God fhould reveal his mind to them, or anto wicked wretches? and is it liker that he fhould forfake all the holy perfons of all ages, and give them up to deceit in the greatest matters, who most diligently study and pray for Knowledge, rather then forfake those fensual wretches that wilfully forfake him?

Quer. 19. Is there not in thy own Confeience, at least some-U.3.